Free Cooking School to Be Held, Jan. 23-26

Once more the Janesville Gazette will offer to housewives practical instruction of the art of cooking, when lectures and demonstrations will be given at Leath's store, Jan. 23-26. Miss Elsie Hinkley, a woman of much experience, being in charge. The last cooking school was a great success, and many housewives since that time have been making better things to eat, arranging the meals more properly, and making a better use of their housekeeping.

Miss Hinkley is a home economics expert of much practical experience, a graduate of Lewis Institute, and does many things besides theorizing. A lecture will be given first, lasting from two until four o'clock, and after that there will be a demonstration of the points brought out by cooking a number of articles. One of the most helpful lectures is expected to be "Planning the Meals for a Family" while the other three are also of much practical aid.

The lectures and demonstrations cover the entire field of cooking and are not confined to cakes and desserts. Women will find out how to cook the best bread and rolls in the easiest and most economical manner, while food combinations will also be explained.

The school will be free and open to all.

Fletcher, serving a tray supper at 6:15.

Mrs. F. F. Lewis had charge of the program and she gave a talk on Hawaii in early missions. Mrs. John Nichols gave a vocal solo and Miss Gertrude Cobb missionary current events.

Miss Susan Jeffers read a letter from the Millard family at Bloomington, thanking the band for their Christmas box.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.
Pandora Nicholson is shy to a painful degree. She is an odd, little, sensitive, neglected girl who lives as a quiet housewife with her Uncle Peter and Aunt Maude. And their daughter, Gladys—who is loud voiced and popular.
No one understands or cares for her except her father who also lives there. Dora is afraid of people, cannot talk to them, never knows what to say. A quiet little friendship begins with Gladys. When Gladys suddenly decides she wants him, though every other boy but Pandora had been devoted to her. Eventually she becomes engaged to him. Dora is broken hearted.
Dora had a friendship with Gladys Gates when that rather exotic lady was visiting Norfolk City. It is broken off when Mrs. Gates returns to New York. Gladys and Morton are married.

A BIG PARTY Chapter 42.

Dora turned to find the owner of this voice. A tall young man, rather handsome, with a fresh skin and a smile that was standing there looking down at her—apparently as much alarmed as she was.

"You see, it's this way," he began again. Then he broke off to laugh. "I feel like a new fool. Do forgive me, Miss Nicholson. It's all Gloria's fault. I'm sure someone's going to pounce on me for abusing a child." He looked around, hunting the traveler's Aid representative to help him out of his difficulty, half afraid if she did not come that he couldn't explain.

Then he looked at Dora again and began to laugh.

"Is Gloria ill?" Dora asked. "No—she couldn't leave Frankie who is getting a temperature again. I've been there all night, and I'm here because she had to go to her office. Here—she sent this note."

He thrust at her an envelope unsealed. Inside on a single sheet of paper was scrawled in pencil.

"It's all right, darling. Bobby will bring you here."

Dora looked up again at the stranger. He had a somewhat pale face and was too perfectly dressed. His beautifully manured nails made her ashamed of her own that were split and rough and stained.

When he came back she was standing with her face raised looking at the blue ceiling with its painted stars and marvelling that some of them showed electric lights.

"Beautiful place, isn't it?—no one who lives here ever looks at it so you'd better stare your fill now," he remarked, and then began to laugh again.

In the taxi he said: "I should have introduced myself in a less sketchy manner than Gloria did. My whole name is Robert Darcy."

"Miss Pandora Nicholson," Dora managed. But she couldn't think of anything more to say, so she turned her face and looked out the taxi window at the houses and people and streets, amazed at the size of everything and the noise of the city, hoping Mr. Darcy wouldn't think her rude.

They stopped at last at an old-fashioned apartment house. They had to climb three flights, the taxi man grumbling as he carried the trunk. Then a door was opened and a joyous voice called.

"Hello, dear!" And Pandora found herself being embraced and kissed by Gloria. They went into a room that seemed full of people, though there were only two men, Frankie on the couch and Gloria, Darcy and herself. A fire was burning in a tiny fireplace—Gloria took the shabby apartment because of that, one feature.

"This is Pan," Gloria announced. "Now then, run home, both of you. Bobby can stay because he's been at the station, and is going to make broth for Frankie. Dora was so frightened she backed off into a corner. The two men left. Quiet, comparative quiet, settled on the room."

Dora went over to Frankie who lay with bright eyes and flushed face on the couch.

"It's great fun being sick," he informed her. "Bobby's been doing things to amuse me while Mama's out, until the people below banged on the stamperes. We were making so much noise."

Gloria's suggestion that brought prompt tears.

"I want the party to go on," he sobbed. Gloria sank down in a chair, looking helpless for once.

"I'll leave him to you Pan," she said. "Keep him quiet tomorrow. I must be at the office. I'm going back now to see whether Bobby has broken everything in the kitchen getting supper."

Left alone with him, Dora—or Pan as she instantly became—looked at the children. Frankie had met in Norfolk City one hand over his forehead, one holding his two feverish, dry, little hands. When Gloria brought him hot milk, he was quieter and in half an hour, Pan undressed him and put him to bed in his own room, ready to drop off to sleep. She hadn't even taken off her hat.

Gloria came back with apologies then, showed her her own room—tiny as a bandbox—and said they would have to eat scrap dinner in the kitchen.

"I'm glad you've come, Pan," Bobby remarked as he cut up cold chicken. "Gloria needs looking after more than Frankie. When he left, Gloria sat on the bed while Pan unpacked."

Pandora fell asleep in this new room, tired, confused, excited, humbly grateful that Gloria had sent for her, humbly glad she could be of use to her.

To Be Continued.

The married couple always looks upon her husband as the best.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two chums between 17 and 18 years old and have been going with a couple of boys about the same age for a month. They have asked us to marry them, but we think we are too young. They will not listen to no for an answer. However, they are popular and two other girls would like to go with them. What would you advise us to do?

Young men of 18 are too young to marry, and you also are very young. Tell them to wait a year or two longer and your answer will mean more.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 16 years of age. I will be 17 in four months. I think I am too young to go riding with a boy 18 years of age. I only go twice a week and am always in by 10 or 10:30.

The boys I go with is a Christian and has had his hair shaved. He says he loves me and I believe him. He thinks I am too young to know what true love is. Do you think I am?

Do you think it proper for him to put his arms around me?

Yes, you are too young to go riding with a boy. He puts his arms around you and talks of love, and although he is a gentleman, you can never tell what circumstances might lead to. Let him call on you in your home, but do not go riding.

At the age of 16 you can scarcely be sure of your love. It might last.

MOTHERLY ADVICE

I've heard mothers say to their daughters who were expectant mothers and who were rather shy and nervous very particular about everything they did—"Oh, all this fussing with doctors is nonsense. In my day we took our children naturally and didn't bother—" and so on, proving that the old-fashioned hit-or-miss method was quite the best.

Don't you believe it! I have all respect for old-fashioned mothers. They often are the best, and often they are exactly the same as the newest and most expensive of new-fashioned methods. But when it comes to babies—

Well, use your common sense. A child's character and many of its physical characteristics may be determined ages before it was born, by the mere fact of its parents being what they are—but the comparatively few months of the child's prenatal life of the most importance, and what the mother does or neglects may make all the difference in its future life—and her future health and good looks.

Health and baby centers in the poor foreign quarters tell me that they have reduced infant mortality and raised the grade of children born there, by the once-a-month urine examination of the mother, and the advice about diet, etc., which they give the mother based upon such an examination. If our poor foreign mothers benefit by this, why not our American young mothers? Every woman should be examined thoroughly once a month by a competent doctor, particularly towards the last months.

Of course the child should be taken naturally. We take our three meals a day naturally, too—but we generally, if we're wise, find out the things that agree with us best to eat then. Ordinary sense should be used in this. Human functions add most natural of human functions.

Not only child, but mother too, benefits.

Anxious Nell—Tincture of benzoin is the same as what is known as "benzoin." It is a milky astrigent and bleach, but should not be used continuously as it would make the skin harsh and dry. It takes only a few drops in a basin of water when rinsing after bathing the face and throat. As soon as the benzoin makes the water milky, the amount will be correct and any more benzoin added after that time will be too much, making the skin feel drawn. If you should have this sensation it will disappear if you rub into the skin a few drops of oil.

Whole Wheat Muffins—Make like above recipe, stirring in whole wheat flour instead of the last thing. Bake quickly in muffin rings or tins.

My Perennial Beauty

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have the face and complexion of a girl of 19, as millions of women know. A youthful bloom which is the envy of countless debutantes.

Yet for 31 years I have been, as you know, a musical comedy star.

Tens of thousands of women have asked me to tell them how I kept this girlish beauty. Now, I am doing that, as a duty to womankind. And I have arranged to supply, to women who wish, the identical helps that I use.

First—Youth Clay
My supreme help is a facial clay. Not the crude old muddy complexion clays so many use today.

Mine is a white, refined clay, perfected by scientists who have spent 20 years in the study of facial clays.

French beauty experts many years ago, taught me what clays could do. Then few women used them, and those women became the marvels of whole nations for their wonderful complexions.

Now countless women use them. Rosy, clear complexions are seen everywhere today. Most women know that clay applications are essential to beauty of the face. A woman who omits them does herself injustice.

Now refined clay
But ordinary facial clay gives you no conception of what clay can do.

YANKS WITHDRAW MORAL SUPPORT

Return of Troops Heralded as Protest of Disinterested Nation Against Invasion.

By DAVID LAWRENCE Copyright, 1923, by Janesville Daily

Washington—The Stars and Stripes have been ordered home from the Rhine.

The last vestige of military support, remaining in Europe since the armistice, has been withdrawn.

Only 1,200 soldiers of the American army of occupation have been on the Rhine for many months.

The terms of armistice and the treaties of peace.

Although no comment accompanied the announcement of the United States government's sudden decision to withdraw its army of occupation, it is no doubt that the government here wants to ring round the world as the protest of a disinterested nation against the German invasion.

The abrupt statement of government policy comes somewhat as a surprise, even though the senate by overwhelming vote has passed last week a resolution expressing its opinion that the troops should be withdrawn by the president.

Two Much for U. S. — The sight of French troops marching right through the American lines on an errand which the United States government had plainly disapproved was too much for American pride.

Announcement of the decision of the American government was dramatic. The newspaper correspondents were in the hall of the building when Mr. Hughes' clerk came running after them to say that the secretary of state had an important statement to make.

Mr. Hughes came into the room when the newspaper men were again assembled and with characteristic positiveness said:

"The time has come to complete the withdrawal of the American troops from the Rhine."

On being asked whether any new circumstances had arisen to bring about that decision, the secretary said he didn't want to say anything about it. He plainly intended that the statement should speak for itself.

Military Details — Meanwhile, at the White House, Secretary of War Weeks had been conferring with President Harding on the military details of the withdrawal.

There is always the possibility of friction so long as any American soldiers are quartered on foreign territory, but the Germans really liked the American troops, and said so.

The upshot of the day's news is a confirmation of the viewpoint expressed in these dispatches Tuesday that the relations between France and America which were so cordial before the war and became closer as the United States sent an army of two millions to France are now growing more and more strained every
